Legitimate Work-at-Home Opportunities Can Supplement Displaced Workers' Incomes
Insight and guidance for work-at-home job seekers from a seasoned work-at-home entrepreneur.

For displaced American workers searching for new employment in today's tough economy, legitimate work-at-home opportunities can help bridge the gap between jobs and may offer new career opportunities for those longing for a work-at-home lifestyle.

Through her recently released book Your Virtual Home Office Can Be a Reality! and her Web site (<http://www.yourvirtualhomeoffice.com>), author and entrepreneur Melissa Rich draws on years of experience to offer hope and guidance to anyone considering working from a virtual home office. Rich shares knowledge and valuable insight to help readers decide if working from home is really for them, and how to get started.

The work-at-home industry is exploding and forever changing business, especially as more employees find themselves laid off, downsized and searching for work. Working from home may be a viable option to help supplement reduced income, but it's difficult to know where to start.

Your Virtual Home Office Can Be a Reality! provides a realistic vision and concise, practical information about the work-at-home industry and factors necessary for success. It covers a wide range of topics including required personality traits, evaluating opportunities, setting up your virtual home office and inspirational success stories. Sol Levine and Linda De Dominicis, managers of the Telecommuting Jobs website, tjobs.com affirm that Rich's book "covers every question you have about working from home - - and all the questions you should be asking."

Although new to the publishing arena, Rich is no stranger to the work-at-home world of virtual home offices, with more than 20 years of business experience in accounting, management, operations, sales and marketing. Rich has successfully worked from home for over ten years.
